

1st Annual Interdisciplinary WZB Conference “The Future of Democracy?”

9-10 October 2025 at the WZB Berlin Social Science Center

Submission deadline: 30 April 2025

The WZB Berlin Social Science Center is dedicating its first annual interdisciplinary conference to the topic of “The Future of Democracy?”. In light of current political developments and the increasing threats to democracy, this conference seeks to harness the expertise of the social sciences to better understand and address these challenges. We invite submissions that analyze the obstacles facing liberal democracies and explore potential solutions for safeguarding and strengthening democratic institutions. We explicitly invite submissions from economics, sociology, political science, psychology, and law, and want to create a forum for interdisciplinary discussions.

The conference will take place on 9-10 October 2025 at the WZB Berlin Social Science Center. The conference organizers are Nicola Fuchs-Schündeln, Daniel Ziblatt and Michael Zürn.

Confirmed keynote speakers are:

- Chris Bail (Duke)
- Tim Besley (LSE)
- Catherine de Vries (Bocconi)

The scientific part will be accompanied by a panel with high-ranking representatives from politics and civil society, as well as a concluding panel (confirmed attendance by Pratap Mehta, Princeton).

We now invite submissions from interested researchers of all social science disciplines. Only full-length non-published papers will be considered. Potential topics for the parallel sessions are (but are not limited to):

- Polarization
- Misinformation and social media
- Party systems
- (Dis-)satisfaction with democracy
- Representation and legitimation deficits
- Role of courts and legal system in protecting democracy
- Civil society and civic engagement
- Democracy and the economy
- Science, truth and democracy
- The liberal international order
